Forecast for Wednesday 30 Dec 2020

Weather: Northwest winds will bring a steady flow of snow showers through much of the day, these merging into a longer spell of snow through morning which is likely to bring 5-10cm in a few hours to many northern aspects. Some respite through evening as some cloud breaks develop.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 20% with breaks fleeting and unreliable. Cloud cover often down to 300-500m in and around showers.

Visibility: Often good on sheltered lower slopes across the southern ranges, but very variable at height as snow frequently brings visibility down to a few hundred metres.

Met Office Aberdeen Meteorologist's View
Best of the limited shelter likely across south facing aspects of Glen Affric and Glen Shiel. Glen temperatures generally closer to minus 2 Celsius at first.

Forecast for Thursday 31 Dec 2020
Weather: Another cold, windy day with snow showers never far away but generally less widespread and heavy compared to Wednesday. Some bright or sunny breaks likely between showers leading to glare off the slowly expanding snowfields. Snow will turn to rain at low levels through the day adding to the risk of severe chill.

Maximum wind: North or NW 20-25 gusting 35mph, easing through evening.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 50% south, 30% north. Showers bringing cloud down to 300-500m, but these passing through relatively quickly.

Visibility: Very variable. Snow showers bringing whiteout conditions away from low level. Some lengthy breaks between showers will afford some reasonable views.

Temperature: Glens: Around freezing, rising to 2 or 3 C briefly.
At 800m: Minus 3 C.
Freezing level: 300m rising 600m.
